Introduction. Blinding is a procedure in which one or more parties in a trial are kept unaware of which treatment arms participants have been assigned to, in other words, which treatment was received. Blinding is an important aspect of any trial done in order to avoid and prevent conscious or unconscious bias in the design and execution of a clinical trial.

A large tract of the cliff was illuminated in a blinding red light and a dreadful smell of blood filled the air. This roiling killing intent locked onto all the people standing in the distance. The people who arrived were mostly from the influences he had slaughtered in the Akashic Dream Battlefield.
